The time was short in Paris, in fact too short, as there was a big track meet scheduled in London between the British Empire and the United States. This meet was held at the famous Queens Club track and was really a big society event. As is customary in the English meets, only the firsts counted, and those for only one point. There were ten events on the program and each country won five, so there were no hard feelings at the end of the day s sport. A great crowd attended and, as is characteristic of the English people, every winner received a great ovation. It certainly made one feel good just to be at that meet, whether he won or not. After this meet various groups were formed...
