I think the advantage of our clover--it used to be in Ohio, and that was where we did the clover business--we thought it was not the advantage of our clover there so much that we would plant it to-day and plough it up to-morrow, but that the center would come out of those roots and make it porous and let the air and sunshine down into our ground. I want to know if that will be advantageous to my orchard. Mr. Newton--This matter of a cover crop was first suggested about two years ago to my knowledge by the Agricultural School over there at Grand Junction, and there are very few who...
